Petersbourg, October 7.

THE Empreſs is come this Evening to the Winter Palace for the reſt of the Seaſon.

Nice, October 21, N. S. On the 15th Inſtant his Sardinian Majeſty and the Army moved forward to La Turbie, and from thence to Drappe: The Enemy diſputed his Ground Inch by Inch, and with more Obſtinacy than was expected; but when they found themſelves hard preſſed, and perceived, by our Way of operating, that we were reſolved to force the Poſts, and drive them before us, they inſenſibly gave Way from one Mountain to another, till they came on Monday laſt into the Plain about this Town, and in the Night paſſed the Var with ſome Precipitation, being follow'd cloſe by our Van-guard, which skirmiſhed ſome Time with their Rear before they could all get over the River. On the 19th in the Morning the King of Sardinia march'd to this Place, and enter'd the Town, attended by a numerous Croud of People, and the loudeſt Acclamations of Joy at the Sight of their Deliverer. The Army is encamped on this Side the Var, and in Sight of the Enemy, who borders the other Side from the Sea to St. Laurent. They ſtill have a Bridge on that River, and have only broke that Part of it which is between us and a ſmall Iſland they have filled with Miquelets and Grenadiers, who keep firing upon our advanced Poſts. In the Caſtle of Montalban they have left about 100 Men, and 600 in that of Villa Franca. As ſoon as our Cannon is arrived, it is hoped, we ſhall be able to force them both. The former can make no Reſiſtance at all, and the other is not expected to hold out long, as the Inhabitants, and our Detachment in the Town of Villa Franca, have found Means to cut off the Water that runs from the neighbouring Mountains into the Caſtle. We have juſt received Advice, that the Enemy has entirely burnt his Bridge on the Var, and ſeems on the Point of marching farther into the Country, where they burn and deſtroy every thing they cannot carry away with them. Sixteen Spaniſh Battalions broke up their Camp Yeſterday Morning, and, as we are told, were marching towards St. Paul, by which, if true, it is to be conjectured that they are ſteering their Courſe towards Savoy.

Boiſleduc, October 27, O. S. Sir John Ligonier is expected here this Day, and the four Britiſh Regiments of Foot with the Field Train march in To-morrow.

Hague, November 8, N. S. The Earl of Sandwich returned to Breda on Sunday laſt, and the Penſionary intends to follow To-morrow or next Day. The freſheſt Advices of the Operations in Italy, are of the 21ſt paſt, from the King of Sardinia's Quarters at Nice; when the Enemy

[Price Two-pence.]

Enemy had no Troops left on the Italian Side of the Varo, ſave a Handful of Men in the Caſtles of Ventimiglia and Villa Franca.

Hague, November 8, N. S. By Advices from Paris of the 4th Inſtant, Forty Battalions and the ſame Number of Squadrons were marched from Flanders, in order to take Winter Quarters in Burgundy and Franche Comté, and to replace the Regiments which were ſent from thence into Provence. It was given out, that the French Army there would ſoon be compleated to 60,000 Men, and that the Prince of Conti was to have the Command thereof. Theſe Letters ſay, that the French were encamped at Vance, and were guarding the Defiles through which the Allies muſt paſs; that the Spaniards remained with the French; and that Marſhal Maillebois ſet out for Toulon upon the 22d, in order to put that Place into a proper State of Defence. By Letters from Geneva of the 28th paſt, Don Philip was expected the next Day at Chamberry, where his Equipages were already arrived. By our laſt Letters from Bruſſels, Marſhal Saxe had not left that Place, nor was the Day of his Departure fixed.

Kenſington, October 29.

This Day the Right Honourable William Earl of Harrington having reſigned the Seals into the King's Hands, his Majeſty was pleaſed to appoint the Right Honourable Philip Earl of Cheſterfield to be one of his Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State.
